AGING AND YOUR FEET

Click Here for our Order Form.

Aging can sometimes be a difficult process. It affects our whole body, and our emotional life as well. Aging even affects your feet. Over the years we ask a lot of our feet. They carry us over many miles and through many hardships. The feet are the base of your whole body, and they often feel the effects of the demands we place on them. Here are some concerns to look out for as your feet mature.

1. Changing foot shape and size. Your feet do change over time. Your feet spread out and your arches tend to lower as you age. Keep this in mind when purchasing shoes. Improperly fitted shoes can contribute to or cause many problems with your feet like bunions, corns, calluses, abrasions, blisters, hammer toes, ulcers and plantar fasciitis, to name a few. Make sure that you buy shoes based on how they fit, not based on the size on the tag. You should try on shoes, and you should not purchase shoes that are too tight- they will not stretch out but instead will constrict your feet.

2. Overuse can lead to problems. We ask a lot from our feet. We are constantly using them and stressing our feet with long periods of use, unsupportive foot wear and living in a world comprised of hard surfaces. Over time this use wears on our feet. Stress fractures and plantar fasciitis are two of the most common foot ailments caused by overuse. These can cause pain and even prevent you from participating in your usual daily activities. Be careful to look for signs of over-use, especially pain. READ MORE...
